Winter Sports Coverage Previewed

The football season is over, and WYBC's broadcasting booth high above the fifty yard line has been boarded up for another year. Having covered every Yale game including the two road contests at New York and Cambridge, the WYBC sports department might be thought to deserve a rest; however, the break between football and winter sports is so short that WYBC's first sports presentation of the winter season will be a play-by-play description of the Yale-Amherst basketball game Wednesday night, December 1. This broadcast will be the first of 24 home basketball and hockey games to be carried on 640 this year.

WYBC has four veteran announcers ready to describe the court and ice action: Sports Director Glen Gray, Dick Goldman, Mike Shepperd and Dan Curtiss. These sportscasters have been watching Yale sport for at least two years, and will draw on that experience to analyze, compare, and comment on the action. At half-time of the basketball games and between periods of the hockey tilts interesting guests will be interviewed by the announcers. As always, statistics will be compiled at the games, so that individual scoring and team totals will be available.

In addition to the twelve home games in each sport, WYBC will present as many away games as are possible. Each road game to be broadcast will be well publicized, so that WYBC's listeners will be able to follow the teams on the road as well as at home. When Yale plays at home in both basketball and hockey, portions of both games will be carried. Announcers will be stationed at both the Gym and the Arena, and the co-ordinator in Hendrie Hall will switch back and forth as the action merits. The first of these dual broadcasts will occur this Saturday night, December 4.

WYBC will enjoy exclusive coverage of Yale basketball and hockey games.

IVY AT DARTMOUTH: WDBS

Up in the cold, cold north, where the girls wear fur-lined underwear and the men only drink to keep warm, nestled between a golf course and the Hanover House lies the sedate institution of higher education called Dartmouth. And hidden on the third floor of the undergraduate activities building, Robinson Hall, is WDBS, the Voice of Dartmouth, serving the undergraduates, the graduates, and sometimes the Indians in the local woods, by virtue of the fact that it is the only station in Hanover.

Originating in 1940 when three drunk Iroquois sang war chants into a PA system from a green outhouse, the station has grown both in physical layout and in broadcasting time. Today the Dartmouth community receives 18 hours of well-planned and integrated radio per day, ranging in scope from classical music to a student-faculty quiz program which gives prizes to students who can stump the panel. Among the campus favorites is a dinner music show broadcast live from the Hanover House cocktail lounge, and featuring a student pianist, who plays for his supper (so to speak).

WDBS enjoys a comparatively great amount of popularity and respect for a campus
